Iron Mike Monument at La Fièvre

Dear USC Alumni and Friends,

The last few years have truly shown that there is no digital substitute for real-life personal interaction and world exploration. The sensation of standing in a sacred place and taking in one's surroundings is a profound experience. The National WWII Museum's Educational Travel Programs have created countless emotions of honor, awe, disbelief, and pride in our country, and we are thrilled to partner with them for this commemorative tour. As we look forward to the 80th Anniversary of D-Day, we have a chance to honor the men and women who helped to liberate a continent. Their efforts on the Home Front, at sea, on land, and in the air serve to inspire us all.

Join us as we sail from Hamburg on May 29, 2024, with ports of call and a custom itinerary emphasizing the land, sea, and air campaigns of World War II. As a very special guest of our institution, you will travel in complete comfort aboard the exquisite Seabourn Ovation and be there with us in Normandy for an unforgettable 80th anniversary ceremony on June 6, 2024.

A two-day stop in East Anglia, England, will give a special emphasis to the airmen and their ground support who helped make D-Day possible. As featured tour historian and Museum friend Donald L. Miller, PhD is fond of saying, "You can't have D-Day if the Luftwaffe controls the skies." In addition to Dr. Miller, you will share in rich discussions with revered historians Alexandra Richie, DPhil, John McManus, PhD, and Keith Lowe.

As our guest, you'll enjoy privileged access to top WWII sites and special invitations to events both on board and ashore during this major commemoration. For a more robust experience, you may choose to add a specially arranged pre-cruise tour in Hamburg or our post-cruise program in London.

Commemorations, like the 80th Anniversary of D-Day, are instrumental in preserving the memory of World War II. Being in Normandy, surrounded by thousands of people from many nations, to honor a significant event in world history, is unparalleled. With only 300 suites available, accommodations are likely to fill up quickly, and I urge you to reserve your space as soon as possible.

Please call 1-877-813-3329 x 257 to reserve your place on this historic cruise.

Sincerely,

Linda Ball '83

THE INFLUENCE OF AIR POWER ON D-DAY

From the moment the first German bombs fell on Rotterdam in May 1940, causing an intense firestorm and the displacement of tens of thousands of people, military leaders could see that the nature of this war would change. Civilians were targets even if they were miles away from the front lines. The ensuing Battle of Britain in the summer of 1940 resulted in a series of escalating attacks that drew British civilians into the war.

As aerial bombardments increased, so, too, did the technology to combat them. As the Luftwaffe approached the English coast, a combination of radar, coastal observers, and radio lines tracked their movements. The fighters of the Royal Air Force quickly scrambled to meet the invading aircraft. In the face of mounting casualties, Hitler called off his planned invasion of England.

The escalation of tactics continued as the British and American bombers attacked sites across Europe. In July 1943, a series of raids on Hamburg ignited a firestorm, causing a massive migration of displaced Germans. The stories of the Allied raid spread throughout the country, sowing doubt in the superiority of the Nazi regime. To mask their attacks on Hamburg, the British used chaff, also called Window, to confuse German radar technicians.

In preparation for the D-Day landings along the Normandy coast, Allied bombers attacked marshalling yards, rail lines, and bridges across France to impede the German response. The development of the P-51 as an escort plane allowed Allied bombers to fly deep into Europe to strike at German industry. Raids on oil refineries, factories, and weapon projects such as the V-2 site in Peenemünde, caused German industry to move underground. As casualties mounted, the most difficult resource for the Germans to replace became their trained pilots.

By June 6, 1944, the Luftwaffe was not a major concern for the architects of D-Day. The skies belonged to the Allies. Once the beaches were secure and the barrage balloons were in place, the Luftwaffe could pose little threat to the supply operations.

Air superiority came with a cost. Some airmen remember a saying that to “fly in the Eighth Air Force then was like holding a ticket to a funeral—your own.” The Eighth Air Force suffered more than 47,000 casualties, including 26,000 dead. Every American military cemetery in Europe features the names, squadrons, and bomb groups of the Eighth Air Force.

His books on World War II include The Story of World War II, D-Days in the Pacific, and Masters of the Air: America's Bomber Boys Who Fought the Air War Against Nazi Germany. Masters of the Air, named "outstanding book of the year" by World War II magazine, is the primary source for Apple TV's upcoming miniseries, in which Miller is serving as chief historical consultant. He was also a consultant for HBO's miniseries The Pacific, and served as writer and chief historical consultant for WWII in HD, a 10-hour series that aired on the History Channel. His works on other history subjects include City of the Century: The Epic of Chicago and the Making of America and Vicksburg: Grant's Campaign that Broke the Confederacy, which was released in October 2019. During the 2018–2019 academic year, he was in residence at the US Naval Academy as the Leo A. Shifrin Chair of Naval and Military History, a distinguished visiting professorship. His current project is a major three-volume history of the US Army in the Pacific/Asia theater during World War II. The first volume, Fire and Fortitude: The US Army in the Pacific War, 1941–1943, received the Gilder-Lehrman Prize for Military History.

Keith Lowe is the author of several major works of history. His first book, Inferno, was a critically acclaimed study of the bombing of Hamburg in 1943. His second book, Savage Continent, became a Sunday Times top-10 best-seller, and went on to win both the Hessel-Tiltman Prize for History and Italy's national Cherasco History Prize. It is now a standard work on the wave of violence and revenge that swept Europe after the war. The Fear and the Freedom is an intimate history of the long-term consequences of the World War II, and the shadow that it still casts over our lives today. It was shortlisted for the Historical Writers' Association Non-Fiction Crown, and has been adapted as a 12-part radio series in the Czech Republic. His latest book, Prisoners of History, examines our monuments to the war, and asks what they are really saying about our history and ourselves. Written at a time when statues around the world were being torn down by both governments and protesters, it is a timely look at some of the world's most important symbols of our collective past. Lowe regularly speaks on TV and radio, and he often lectures on postwar history at venues across Europe and North America. He has written for a variety of newspapers and journals, including The Daily Telegraph, The Times, The Wall Street Journal, El País and the Neue Zürcher Zeitung. ABOUT THE TOUR

Bomber warfare was a new concept in the years leading to World War II. Japan's war against China in the 1930s employed bombs that specifically targeted civilians. In 1940, the German Luftwaffe razed large sections of Rotterdam through aerial bombardment. The escalation of tactics, material, and destruction continued from 1940 to 1945 with numerous cities turning to rubble.

For one week in July 1943, a combined operation by the Royal Air Force and the American Eighth Air Force systematically destroyed Hamburg. Several factors influenced Hamburg's destruction. First, the city was a hub of manufacturing and shipbuilding. Its location near the coast meant that Allied bombers had little resistance from the ground. Also, Hamburg was one of five "Führer Cities," designated for massive construction projects that would demonstrate the power of the Third Reich.

On this two-day tour of Hamburg, visit St. Nikolai Church, preserved for more than 80 years in its state of wartime destruction. Several massive flak towers dot the city, evidence of the German efforts to combat the Allied Bombers. Ohlsdorf Cemetery, one of the largest in the world, contains a mass grave to the victims of the attack overlooked by a statue showing the crossing of the River Styx.

DAY 1: MAY 29, 2024

EMBARKATION: HAMBURG

The voyage begins in the city where the bomber war reached a pinnacle in July 1943.

For nearly a week, British and American bombers pounded the city “round the clock.” Firestorms ripped through the city, creating a refugee crisis that shocked Germany. The invincibility of the Nazi regime was shaken as stories of the city’s destruction spread with the fleeing citizens. Keith Lowe provides commentary on Operation GOMORRAH during a special presentation this evening.

THE MURMANSK CONVOYS

As Experienced by Jennings Hill, United States Merchant Marine

To keep the Soviet Union in the war, materiel from the United States was essential. The only way to deliver the aid was to ports in the north such as Murmansk and Archangel. This required ships to navigate the treacherous waters north of Scandinavia. Rough seas, cold weather, and U-boat patrols made this a hazardous run.

Jennings Hill experienced this route from the Liberty Ship SS Andrew W. Preston. On one mission, the Andrew W. Preston broke down and was alone at sea for 24 hours. The crew discussed that the German battleship Graf Spree was somewhere in those waters, but they were able reach Murmansk without incident. Hill remembers the temperatures reaching 60 degrees below zero at Murmansk, which reduced the amount of time one could spend on guard duty.

Jennings Hill’s service took him to the UK, Iceland, the Soviet Union, Panama, and the Philippines.

Use the camera on your smartphone to scan the QR code or visit ww2online.org and enter “Jennings Hill” into the search field to hear the rest of the story.

DAY 2: MAY 30, 2024

DAY AT SEA

Settle in aboard the Seabourn Ovation during a day at sea. Discussions with the featured cruise historians will highlight the journey to come. As we prepare for our first ports of call, listen and discuss with the historians in formal and informal settings. Topics will include the evolution of the air war, the strategies to invade and liberate Europe, and the preparations for D-Day.

DAY 3: MAY 31, 2024
AMSTERDAM

After the Netherlands fell in 1940, the oppression by the Nazi regime clamped down on Dutch society. The country’s Jewish population was forced into hiding as the Nazis deported Jews to the death camps. The Diary of Anne Frank tells just one family’s story during their time in hiding. Throughout the country, thousands of Jewish families fled into hiding with fears of discovery or betrayal. On a canal cruise of the city and a visit the Dutch Resistance Museum, learn more about the families who went into hiding and the Dutch citizens who chose to collaborate or resist.

DAY 4: JUNE 1, 2024
GREAT YARMOUTH

From 1942–1945, the east of England was the most heavily trafficked air space in the world. Airfields popped up every few miles, creating miniature cities populated with young American flyers and the ground crews that sustained them. Dubbed “The Friendly Invasion,” this influx of Americans transformed this rural landscape. Those who are alive today and still remember the presence of the aircrews have lovingly restored many of the control towers, runways, and Nissen huts, turning them into small museums.

OPERATION CHOWHOUND

As experienced by Chester Sharp, 561st Squadron, 388th Bomb Group

Conditions grew desperate in the Netherlands during the last months of World War II. A combination of increased activity by the Dutch Resistance, the Allied landings of Operation Market-Garden, and a strike by Dutch train workers led the Germans to confiscate Dutch agricultural products. The “Hunger Winter” of 1944–1945 reduced rations to under 500 calories a day in large parts of the country, and 20,000 deaths resulted from the famine.

The Allies reached a deal with the occupying Germans for relief missions from May 1–8, 1945. Chester Sharp flew on several of these missions. On his first mission of “Operation Chowhound,” Sharp remembers descending to 200 feet and noticing the Germans had lowered their antiaircraft guns parallel to the ground and were waving to the pilots. At 125 feet, the aircraft turned to the drop zone, and Sharp could see the faces of the Dutch people waiting for the drops. About 40 years after the mission, Sharp was on an Alaskan cruise and met the Dutch officer of the ship who told him that he was one of the young boys waiting near the drop zones that week.

FLYING IN THE “BLOODY HUNDREDTH”

As experienced by John “Lucky” Luckadoo, 351st Squadron, 100th Bomb Group

The 100th Bomb Group flew from Thorpe Abbots, an airfield carved from farmland near the town of Diss, in the UK. The 100th earned the nickname “The Bloody Hundredth” due to heavy losses incurred in the early days of the Bomber War.

On October 8, 1943, John “Lucky” Luckadoo flew his 21st mission, a bombing run over Bremen, Germany, often referred to as “Flak City” by the aircrew. The flak was particularly thick that day, and the German fighters flew through it for the first time in a coordinated attack on the bombers. Luckadoo watched a B-17 from his own squadron go down after it was rammed by a German Fw 190. Luckadoo’s plane was hit in the nose, but he managed to get it back to base that day.

John Luckadoo completed his 25 missions and returned to the United States where he took advantage of the GI Bill and graduated from the University of Denver in 1950.

Use the camera on your smartphone to scan the QR code or visit ww2online.org and enter “John Luckadoo” into the search field to hear the rest of the story.

DAY 5: JUNE 2, 2024 GREAT YARMOUTH

Imperial War Museum Duxford is the UK's largest aviation museum. Aircraft restoration and maintenance takes place on-site, allowing visitors to view vintage planes in various stages of display or readiness. The American Air Museum occupies a large space on the its campus. RED CROSS SERVICE IN EAST ANGLIA

As experienced by Blanche Gangwere, American Red Cross

The women of the Red Cross played an integral role on the airfields of East Anglia. Andy Rooney described them as “a sort of remote combination of Rita Hayworth-and-your-best-friend’s-big-sister.” Providing moral support, organizing base activities, and maintaining relationships with the locals, the women were the steady influence on base, feeling the victories and the losses.

Blanche Gangwere initially wanted to join the Women Airforce Service Pilots (WASP). She trained with a pilot from World War I and learned how to fly and navigate, but she was deemed too short to serve the WASPs. Instead, Gangwere joined the Red Cross with whom she traveled to airfields in East Anglia and served coffee and donuts to the airmen who needed a sympathetic friend. Even though she served the crews who experienced some of the most harrowing missions of the war, Gangwere remembers that the airmen mostly wanted to talk about home.

Blanche Gangwere’s Red Cross service took her to France near the end of the war. She returned to England aboard a B-17. The pilot learned that she had flight training but was deemed too short, so he invited her to fly the plane across the English Channel. She accepted.

Use the camera on your smartphone to scan the QR code or visit ww2online.org and enter “Blanche Gangwere” into the search field to hear the rest of the story.

DAY 6: JUNE 3, 2024 DUNKIRK

From May 27 to June 4, 1940, the British Expeditionary Force mounted Operation Dynamo, a dramatic evacuation of Allied soldiers who were trapped by the Nazis near the beaches of Dunkirk. Augmented by air support over the English Channel, hundreds of ships ferried nearly 340,000 British and French soldiers away from Dunkirk to ports in England. The 2017 film Dunkirk dramatized this rescue with points of view from the beaches, the English Channel, and the cockpit of a Spitfire. On tour, visit the evacuation beaches, the East Mole, and a few of the film sites.

LE HAVRE | THE BRITISH SIDE OF D-DAY

Arriving in Normandy, begin the tour of D-Day and the Battle of Normandy. The British and Canadians landed on the three easternmost beaches—Sword, Juno, and Gold—while the 6th Airborne Division secured vital bridges and neutralized several German gun batteries. Just after midnight on June 6, 1944, three British gliders under the command of Major John Howard scored the first Allied victory of the day at a bridge soon to be known as Pegasus Bridge. Along the coast, troops fought their way on shore and moved toward the highway connecting Caen and Bayeux. Guests may also choose an excursion to Dieppe, where, in August 1942, an ill-fated raid by mostly Canadian forces, code-named Operation Jubilee, would offer invaluable lessons for D-Day nearly two years later.

ACCOMMODATIONS: SEABOURN OVATION \(B, L, D\)

CHERBOURG | OMAHA BEACH

The men who faced the landing at Omaha Beach knew that they faced formidable terrain. Backed by a steep 100-foot bluff, Omaha Beach favored the German defenders. Along the western sector of the beach, the 29th Division faced intense German firepower that opened up as soon as the ramps on their Higgins Boats dropped. Toward the east, the 1st Infantry Division faced similar firepower from positions such as WN-62. Through several gaps in the defenses, the first Americans began to scale the bluffs. One by one, the German guns started to fall silent, and Omaha Beach was ready for unloading operations by the next morning.

FIGHTERS AT DIEPPE

As experienced by Robert Inghram, 39th Fighter Squadron, 31st Fighter Group

Operation Jubilee, a reconnaissance-in-force on the French port of Dieppe, involved more than 6,000 soldiers. Almost 5,000 of the personnel were Canadian, and a small contingent of US Army Rangers participated in their first ground combat in Europe. The raid achieved few of its goals with a cursory study of a German radar station being one of the few highlights of the day.

American fighter pilot Robert Inghram flew a Spitfire as part of the operation. Inghram's plane supported the transports loaded with Canadian soldiers. Inghram remembers expending all of his ammunition in this role. On his way back across the English Channel, he was hit by friendly fire and bailed out over the water. He spent 40 hours in a dinghy before he landed on the French coast where he was taken captive.

Robert Inghram spent the remainder of the war as a prisoner in Stalag Luft III. He learned of the "Great Escape" through communication with the British section of the camp.

MOVING INLAND FROM OMAHA BEACH

As experienced by Walter "Walt" D. Ehlers, 18th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Division

Walt Ehlers landed on Omaha Beach on D-Day, jumping into water that went over his head as his landing craft hit a sandbar. Walt's brother Roland also served in the 1st Division. Roland's landing craft was hit by a mortar as it approached, and Roland was killed. Walt only knew that his brother was missing in action over the following days as he moved inland. On June 9, near the town of Goville, Walt and his squad encountered tough resistance. Walt continually led his men, providing covering fire for their movements. Walt received the Medal of Honor for his actions.

Walt found out about his brother's death a month after D-Day. After being wounded in Normandy, Walt returned to the 1st Division prior to the Battle of the Huertgen Forest. After the war, Walt spent 29 years working for the Veteran's Administration supporting combat veterans.

DAY 9: JUNE 6, 2024

CHERBOURG | 80TH ANNIVERSARY OF D-DAY

Every five years, people travel from across the world to pay their respects to the soldiers, sailors, and airmen of the D-Day operation. Moving tributes, inspirational speeches, and emotional moments are the hallmarks of this day.

RETURNING TO NORMANDY

As experienced by Robert L. Williams, 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division

In the decades after D-Day, the veterans slowly began to return to Normandy. Sometimes they brought their families, and other times they traveled with men from their unit. The anniversary commemorations held every five years in Normandy are momentous occasions when people from across Europe join Americans and Canadians to thank the veterans for what they did in Normandy.

Robert Williams jumped into Normandy with the 101st Airborne Division on D-Day. He remembers landing in a marsh near Foucarville. He remembers the fighting in Carentan to be the most challenging. In 1994, Williams and 19 other WWII veterans jumped into Normandy for the 50th Anniversary of D-Day. Before the jump, he met the mayor of Paris, visited Euro Disney, and stayed in the home of a local Norman family. He recalls that when the C-47 engines started on June 6, 1994, all 19 veterans felt transported to 1944. He remembers most fondly how wonderfully he was treated by the French during his entire visit.

DAY 10: JUNE 7, 2024

CHERBOURG | THE COTENTIN PENINSULA

The capture of Cherbourg was a primary objective for the Americans who landed at Utah Beach and for the paratroopers who seized the bridges, causeways, and crossroads. In towns and villages such as Sainte-Mère-Église, Sainte-Marie-du-Mont, La Fièvre, Amfreville, and Picauville, heroic actions paved the way for the eventual capture of Cherbourg. The first Americans to enter the port city found the docks in disarray. Engineers arrived shortly after the front-line soldiers, and repairs put the port into operation by August 1944. This evening, sail across the English Channel back to England.

PROTECTING THE BEACHHEAD

As experienced by William Dabney, 320th Very Low Altitude (VLA) Barrage Balloon Battalion

The securing of Normandy's beaches was just the first step in the liberation of Europe. On June 7, 1944, construction was already underway on artificial harbors in Arromanches and Vierville-sur-Mer. Landing Ship Tanks (LST) were on the beaches protected from aerial attacks by barrage balloons. Normandy's logistical operation involved African American units that started landing on D-Day.

William Dabney landed on Omaha Beach toward the end of the day on June 6, 1944. His unit brought their barrage balloons with them to the beach, but Dabney's balloon was lost during the landing. He was able to procure another one the next day and get it in the air. Later in the war, Dabney was able to visit Paris on leave and encountered Moroccan soldiers who served in the French Army. Dabney remembers the Moroccan soldiers giving advice on the best places to visit in the city.

Dabney served until the end of World War II. He used the GI Bill to attend college after the war. He made a trip back to France and was heartened to see the reconstruction of St. Lo and Paris.

Use the camera on your smartphone to scan the QR code or visit ww2online.org and enter "William Dabney" into the search field to hear the rest of the story.

BATTLE OF BRITAIN

ABOUT THE TOUR

Disembark in Dover and transfer to London for an examination of the Battle of Britain. During the summer of 1940, the Royal Air Force (RAF) dueled with the Luftwaffe over the skies of the United Kingdom. As the British population sought refuge in bomb shelters, the RAF developed numerous tactics to keep the damage from German bombers to a minimum.

Journey into the operations of Fighter Command with visits to the Battle of Britain Bunker in Uxbridge and Bentley Priory. The underground control room in Uxbridge served as the main information center for approaching aircraft. Information from radar and coastal observers would be tracked on the plotting table as an ingenious system of clocks and switchboards relayed the information to Fighter Command Headquarters at Bentley Priory.

The air war comes into context at the Imperial War Museum London, where new exhibitions on World War II and the Holocaust opened in 2021. In the new displays, a V-1 flying bomb straddles the galleries to emphasize it as a product of slave labor and its role in terrorizing the British population during World War II. As the RAF learned to tip the missiles with the wings of a Spitfire, the Germans unleashed the V-2 rocket, a weapon that caused more death through its production than its use in combat.
